Research questions

The investigation focuses on answering the following questions:

- How could the excavator leave its workplace, drive onto an in-service track and then collide with the freight train and then the passenger train?
- How are occupational and railway safety considered in the planning and execution of working on the tracks while train traffic continues? How is this supervised internally and externally?

Planning

The report of the study is in its final phase, publication is expected mid-May 2024 on the research page.
